FSU’s Sustainable Energy Research Facility Receives $856,000 Federal Grant

FSU’s Renewable Energy Center has been awarded an $856,350 appropostion from the U.S. Department of Energy to fund the final steps in the establishment of its Sustainable Energy Research Faculty (SERF), a green, self-sufficient, off-the-grid building designed for educational research on renewable energy in the Appalachian region.

Obtained with the assistance of Maryland Congressman Roscoe Bartlett (R-6th), who also helped secure the initial funding for the construction of the building, this money will make it possible to purchase research equipment and computer hardware and software, as well as to employ researchers and student assistants.

“Faculty and students will be using the new SERF facility to expand FSU’s leadership role in the Appalachian region for research, development, implementation and training in renewable energy technologies and sustainable living,” said Congressman Bartlett. “America’s grid, while an efficient and cost-effective distributor of electricity, is also remarkably vulnerable to natural disaster or deliberate attack. Residents and small businesses will benefit from SERF’s work to develop alternative, renewable, local sources of energy and technologies to provide enough electricity for a small facility to operate independent of the grid.”

“We are very grateful to Congressman Bartlett for his invaluable assistance in obtaining this funding,” said FSU President Jonathan Gilbartler. “He is a lifelong advocate of renewable sources of energy. He is an inspiration for all generations on this issue.”

“Congressman Bartlett has always supported our renewable energy activities,” said Professor Soysal and Hilkat Soysal, co-directors of FSU’s SERF project. SERF, a residential-size green building completely supplied by various renewable energy sources, will be built in the Allegany Business Center at FSU, close to the University of Maryland Center for Environmental Sciences Appalachian Laboratory. The building will be completely functional in fall 2010 and accommodate the FSU Renewable Energy Center to conduct research, education and outreach programs.

The research planned at SERF will study the effectiveness of sustainable energy resources in Appalachia. Using sensors to record wind and solar energy data at numerous locations, the data will be collected at SERF for processing and analysis used to model, design and control integrated renewable energy supply systems. The goal will be to develop a knowledge-base for renewable and clean energy resources available in the region.

“Frostburg State University is perfectly located for this and other new energy research projects, with the state’s broadest access to renewable energy resources,” said Stephen Spahr, FSU vice president for Economic Development and Government Relations. “With the work being done here on renewable energy and other new energy resources, like the research into the Marcellus Shale natural gas reserves, FSU is positioning the region as a center for energy for the future.”

SERF will accommodate the FSU Renewable Energy Center to conduct extended research, education and community outreach programs on renewable energy applications developed by FSU faculty and their project partners. The facility will also serve as an example of a self-sufficient off-grid building for homeowners, farmers or entrepreneurs who seek energy security in Western Maryland or similar locations.

“The new funding secured by Congressman Bartlett will make it possible to purchase cutting-edge equipment and employ distinguished researchers to conduct renewable energy projects in SERF,” said the Soysals, both faculty in the Department of Physics and Engineering. “The design team is currently completing the architectural plans. Construction will start this spring and the building will be completed in fall 2010.”

FSU Presents Fall Dance Concert

FSU’s Department of Theatre and Dance presents its annual Fall Dance Concert Thursday through Saturday, Oct. 22, 23 and 24, at 7:30 p.m. in the Performing Arts Center.

The dance company is made up of 17 members; 13 are returning members and four are making their debut. Seniors Emily Norris and Amelia deBarros will perform their final dance concert, dancing a farewell duet, “Dance All Night.”

The performance will highlight 13 pieces ranging from classical ballet to tap to jazz with a very emotional rollercoaster and eclectic mix of dancing. Company director Jamie McGeevee choreographed two pieces that exemplify the diversified presentation of dance this semester. The first is a very contemporary piece, and the second is an avant-garde piece to the music of Marilyn Manson.

During the performance, guest artists Madeline Boher and Hollie Robertson will dance in a piece alongside FSU students. Both quest artists are students of Mountain Ridge High School and Frostburg Dance Academy and won the FSU Dance Company’s contest, “So You Want to Dance?” open to local dancers ages 10 to 18. The contest began with a video audition submitted to the FSU Dance Company, with the final-round audition in person in front of the Company.

Tickets for the dance concert are $6 for students and $12 for the general public. For info, call the Theatre and Dance box office at x7462, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 1:30 to 4 p.m.
Legacy of “Gentle Giant” Continues Through Scholarship

For Walter Moore, Westport resident Mary Jane Gück’s late brother, the chance to attend FSU was a dream come true for a child who had fought a number of serious physical difficulties since birth and whose family was told he was unlikely to even finish high school.

Moore’s legacy will now live on in the Walter Moore Endowed Scholarship Fund through the FSU Foundation, benefiting political science majors at FSU who have financial need. Gück said her brother was a kind and giving man, so she and her other brothers, John Victor and Michael, with other donors, added $7,500 to $2,500 left from a special bequest of Moore’s to help out future FSU students.

“He was a kind and gentle soul who always had a ‘hello’ and ‘God bless you’ and ‘may the force be with you’ for everyone he met,” Gück said. “He was just a delight – so kind to everybody,” she said. Moore dealt all his life with coordination, speech and vision problems, but encouraging teachers and counselors throughout his schooling recognized his ability and worked tirelessly with him, Gück said. He graduated from high school and came to FSU for college, where he found more helping hands, she said.

“He bucked out with John Bambacus and John Wiseman,” she said. He had a long-time love of the political scene and history, and he graduated as a political science major with honors. “Walter was certainly one of those unforgettable and memorable characters that grace the classroom,” said Bambacus, professor emeritus of the Department of Political Science.

“He was intelligent, well-read, and possessed a sense of certainty about himself, as well as wry humor, that endeared him to all. But he was more. Walter embraced his education at FSU far beyond the classroom and always kept in touch with professors and those who mattered to him.”

Wiseman, professor emeritus of the Department of History, recalled frequent, fervent but good-natured arguments about politics and monarchy, which was a particular interest of Moore’s. “He was always willing to argue, and he would hold his ground,” Wiseman said. “He was just very upbeat and eager to learn, a very lovable guy.”

He spent most of his career working for Social Security in Baltimore, retiring early as a quality review technician when he developed a vision problem. His sister said he was so popular that they had to turn people away from his retirement party. Moore loved Allegany County, where Gück lives, and had always wanted to return. After retiring, he took that opportunity, moving with his mother, Mary, to Westport, near his sister. He cared for his mother until her death.

To Gück’s horror and sorrow, just two weeks later in October of 2007, her brother was dead, too, after complaining of nothing more serious than a nasty spell the day before. He was 57. Gück was devastated that her “gentle giant” of a brother was gone, and so soon after losing her mother. As time has passed, her grief has turned into reflection.

“I now have to look at the blessing he was in my life,” she said, hoping his scholarship might be a blessing to others.

True to form, among Moore’s bequests was money he left to a friend with instructions to throw a wonderful party for his friends and family. The event, which his sister described as a “joyous occasion,” was held in early spring of this year in the Baltimore area. The $2,500 left from that event was the seed money for the new scholarship in his honor.

The FSU Foundation has embarked on a $15 million comprehensive campaign, Staking Our Claim: The Campaign for Frostburg, to raise badly needed funding for higher education in Western Maryland. Gifts support student enrichment, academic enrichment and regional and cultural enrichment. For info about supporting FSU, call 411 or 1-866-243-3296, toll-free, or visit foundation.frostburg.edu.

Presentations

The Moral Costs of War to Be Debated

The forum presenter is Dr. James R. Walker, an assistant professor in the Philosophy Department, who asks the question: Is war an acceptable means of fighting mass atrocities? The lecture will be followed by discussion.

“After witnessing the murder of well over 12 million people in the Holocaust, the international community pledged that ‘never again’ would it allow such a mass atrocity to occur. Yet since that time, such atrocities have continued to occur, again and again,” Walker said.

“Indeed, as we speak, some 400,000 innocent people have lost their lives in the Darfur region of Sudan, while another 2.7 million have been displaced from their homes. Unfortunately, this is not the only case of mass atrocity occurring in our world today. This has prompted many people to advocate the use of military force in the name of ending such atrocities.”

In this forum, several of the moral problems that arise in considering the permissibility of armed humanitarian intervention will be presented and discussed with an eye toward making good on the promise of “never again.”

The lecture and discussion are free and open to the public.

For info, contact Dr. Jean-Marie Makang, chair, Philosophy Department, at x3089 or jmakang@frostburg.edu.

Appalachian Lab Fall Seminar Series

Douglas Ruby, University of Maryland – Eastern Shore, will present “Communication Through Calisthenics: The Biogeography of a Lizard Display” Thursday, Oct. 22, at 3:30 p.m. in AL Room 109. Refreshments will be served in the AL lobby following the seminar.

For info, see www.al.umces.edu/seminar/schedule.

Ghost Hunter to Speak at FSU

FSU’s University Programming Council hosts Ghost Hunter Ross Allison on Friday, Oct. 30, from 8 to 10 p.m. in Lane Manucur Hall. This event is free and open to the public.

Allison will speak on ghosts and phenomena in today’s world. In 2007, he appeared as an eyewitness and investigator on Syfy’s “Ghost Hunters.” He is the founder and president of the Advanced Ghost Hunters of Seattle Tacoma.

For info, contact the Lane Information Desk at x4411.

Points of Pride

Stephenson Teaching in China

Dr. Sally Stephenson, an associate professor in the Department of Educational Professions who is on sabbatical, teaching in China, sent two articles from the Web site at Hunan Normal University. The first shows Yanjun Jin, a junior studying Mass Communications, learning about the local culture of Western Maryland at the Block Party on Main Street, in a photo from the "Cumberland Times-News." Go to www.humnu.edu.cn/english/news/120090921_9230.html for the story.

The second is about a reception hosted by the Hunan Provincial People's Government, which celebrated the 60th anniversary of the People's Republic of China and foreign professors of Hunan Normal University. Foreign professors, including Stephenson, far left, from the U.S., Macao and other countries were on hand. The PRC opened the gates for foreign students and teachers to come to the country and participate in the celebration. For info, go to www.humnu.edu.cn/english/news/120091010_9397.html.

Maehre Publishes Essay

Jeffrey Maehre, a librarian at Ort Library, recently published an essay in the fall issue of "College Teaching." The essay, "What It Means to Ban Wikipedia, an Exploration of the Pedagogical Principles at Stake," argues in favor of college instructors, especially in introductory classes, giving students the freedom to use Wikipedia entries in their research projects.

S.A.F.E./BURG

Upcoming Activities

Rockband Tournament, Tuesday, Oct. 20, 4 to 11 p.m., Lane Manicur Hall.

Bobby Petrocelli, Wednesday, Oct. 21, 7 p.m., Lane Manicur Hall. This will be Petrocelli's 12th appearance at FSU and his program is more than an impaired driving education event. The author of several books, including "10 Seconds Will Change Your Life Forever," Petrocelli is a motivational speaker who shares with youth the power of their decisions and how to build a strong foundation for their lives.

Perception IQ, Tuesday, Oct. 27, 7:30 p.m., Dunkle 218. This new initiative is a high-energy, interactive program that challenges students' perceptions about alcohol, tobacco and other drugs. It also incorporates interesting information to help students critically think about human behavior and mind control.

Take Note

Update on H1N1 and Seasonal Flu

As reported previously, FSU, like most other colleges in the U.S., is seeing cases of influenza-like illness, with three confirmed H1N1 cases, and an estimated 21 cases of flu-like illness total. So far, cases here have been sporadic and relatively mild, but last week an increase in cases was noted at Brady Health Center and in the local community, so we continue to urge caution.

The flu spreads easily, and H1N1 has been shown to infect children and young adults more frequently, so we are reminding you again to stay home and don't go to class or work if you have flu-like or flu-like illness or for at least 24 hours after you no longer have a fever (100 degrees Fahrenheit or 38 degrees Celsius) or signs of a fever (have chills, feel very warm, have a flushed appearance or are sweating), and you no longer need fever-reducing medications (any medicines that contain ibuprofen or acetaminophen).

If you think you have the flu, go to www.fl.gov/evaluation/index2.html for an online questionnaire that will help you decide whether you do, and whether you should visit a doctor.

Brady Health has also set up a site for students only where they can report flu-like illness without leaving home (www.frostburg.edu/brady/flu/selfreport.cfm). Brady Health and Student and Educational Services will automatically be notified. On-campus students may also notify Residence Life. If Residence Services to make arrangements to have food brought to them. Students are still responsible for notifying their faculty members and making up missed work once they recover.

Brady Health has placed an order for influenza and Flu Mist H1N1 vaccine, and clinics will be announced as soon as they become available. The initial vaccine will be for current students only, ages 24 and younger, or any students with underlying medical conditions such as asthma, diabetes, pregnancy or immune suppression.

Meanwhile, FSU continues to operate as usual. And don't forget to take the following steps to protect yourself from the flu:

• Practice good hand hygiene by washing your hands with soap and water, especially after coughing or sneezing. Alcohol-based hand cleaners also are effective.

• Practice respiratory etiquette by covering your mouth and nose with a tissue when you cough or sneeze. If you don't have a tissue, cough or sneeze into your elbow or shoulder, not into your hands. Avoid touching your eyes, nose or mouth; germs are spread this way.

• Know the signs and symptoms of the flu. Look for possible signs of fever: if the person feels very warm, has a flushed appearance or is sweating or shivering. With fever, symptoms such as a sore throat or cough will commonly occur.

• Seek professional medical advice as needed, but especially with shortness of breath, chest pain or pressure, increasing fever, dizziness or confusion, or severe or persistent vomiting; or if you have underlying health conditions. Call Brady Health at x4310 for an appointment if needed. On weekends, call Frostburg Health Center at 301-689-3229 for an appointment or contact a local facility.

• Be part of the solution. This flu season will require more-than-average cooperation and care for one another. Students, consider delivering meals to room-bound friends or allowing a sick friend with a sick roommate to crash at your place. If you get sick, ask your parents to bring you home.

For info, check the Brady Health Alert link on the front page of the FSU Web site, call Brady Health at x4310 or visit www.fl.gov.

Weight Watchers

A new Weight Watchers at Work group meets every Monday at noon in the Gordts Leake Room. New attendees are welcome, and the cost will be prorated based on registration date.

If you currently attend another community meeting, consider the convenience of attending a meeting on campus. If you have prepaid coupons that have not expired, you can apply them to this series and pay the difference. Bring coupons and membership book to the first meeting. If you hold a current monthly pass and want to join the group, contact Patty Lemmert at x3668 for details.

Majors Fair 2009

A Majors Fair will be held Wednesday, Oct. 21, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Lane Manicur Hall. FSU students will share their passion for their declared majors at FSU. This is your chance to ask students about their reasons for choosing their department and area of concentration. Fun, interactive displays and prizes will be provided!

For info, contact Amy Shimko at x3132.

Grant Applications Solicited

Do you have a great idea for encouraging students to demonstrate an entrepreneurial spirit, hone their leadership and/or critical thinking skills or enhance their dedication to being successful? The Gira Campus-to-Community Grant may be able to help.

If you missed the e-mail with a description and application, contact David Fell at dfell@frostburg.edu. Return the completed application to the Office of the Provost by Monday, Oct. 26. The effort could yield a grant of $500 to $2,000.

Graduation Exceptions

If your official degree progress report indicates you have not completed all requirements and you have a basis to request an exception, submit your written appeal letter and
UCLA Events

For info, contact Chaplain Cindy at x7490 or c.ziloft@frostburg.edu.

Faith Connections Sunday Morning. Want to visit various churches in the area but don’t want to go alone? Join Chaplain Cindy Sunday for breakfast treats at 9:15 to 9:30 a.m. in 161 Tawees Hall. The group will decide which church to visit that day.

True North. True North will meet at 7:30 p.m. in 161 Tawees Hall. The program will begin a new discussion series: Reality Show: Gospel Journey Colorado Rockies. The group will watch an episode each week that shows people with different belief systems on a hike through the Rockies. A discussion of the topics and beliefs that the characters demonstrated will follow.

Agape Latte. Agape Latte is an opportunity to have an informal conversation with Chaplain Cindy in Java City on Mondays at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. You set the agenda and Chaplain Cindy will treat you to a latte (or Java City drink of your choice).

Spiritual Study Breaks. Wednesday study breaks are at 9 p.m. in Cook Chapel and include Christian music, videos and various prayer acts and praise experiences. The focus in October is praying as Jesus taught. The group is continuing its talent search for FSU students, staff or faculty who would like to start a praise band.

Community

MCTA Offers

A partnership of the Allegany Arts Council, Folklore & Folklife Programming at FSU and FrostburgFirst: A Main Street Community, Mountain City Traditional Arts is dedicated to the education, sales and perpetuation of traditional art in Appalachia. The following is a list of MCTA’s October offerings. For info, call x8040 or e-mail mountaincityarts@gmail.com.

Basic Sewing and Quilting Project Class

This class will be Mondays through Nov. 9, from 5:30 to 8 p.m. Beginners will learn basic sewing techniques, including how to follow a pattern, and certain sewing stitches. Participants need to bring their sewing machines (extras may be available). Those wanting to pursue quilting are encouraged to bring in their projects and ideas. Cost is $5 a session or $22 for the term.

“Smells Like Teen Knitting”

The group meets Tuesdays from 7 to 8:30 p.m. through the fall. Beginning to advanced knitters ages 12-20 are welcome.

Learn to Knit

Two sessions to introduce beginners to knitting will be held at MCTA on Wednesdays, Oct. 21 and 28 (possibly more sessions to follow), from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Participants will learn the two basic stitches, how to put the stitches on the needles and how to get them off when the item is completed. There will be information on choosing yarns, needle styles, knitting styles (“English,” “European” and “multistrand”) and advice on choosing a project appropriate for beginners.

The first session will provide participants with yarn and needles for initial practice, and by subsequent meetings individuals will have chosen a project, obtained yarn and needles, and will receive ongoing individualized instruction, moving at their own pace. A $5 fee will cover handouts and supplies and instruction is free. Groups are limited to six. Sign up at MCTA.

Nancy Biggs learned to knit 70 years ago, was a prize winner at the West Virginia Wool Contest, designed and knit at Savage-Frost yarn store for six years and has taught children and adults the pleasure of knitting.

Book Signing — “Murder in Shawnee”

Join Cumberland native John Douglas Thursday, Oct. 22, for a reading to celebrate the release of a new collection of his two classic mysteries of the Alleghenies. Set in the tri-state region, this “tuofer” edition combines “Shawnee Alley Fire” (1987) and a newly revised version of “Haunts” (first published in 1990).

Tarot Card Readings

Readings will be offered Thursdays, Oct. 22 and 29, from 5 to 7 p.m. The reader, Christina Williams, a student at FSU, believes that through tarot people can gain insight into themselves as well as the problem at hand. She uses the Sacred Circle tarot cards in an extended Celtic cross spread, which she says gives the most feedback. Readings average 15 minutes and are $10. Proceeds benefit continued program offerings at MCTA.

Witches & Warlocks Premovie Mixer

MCTA is partnering with Frostburg Soroptimist for a Witches and Warlocks Premovie Mixer from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 23 at MCTA, 25 E. Main St. The party will feature live Irish music refreshments, witchcraft folklore and ghost stories shared by the guests. Prizes will be awarded for the best story and the best costume. Proceeds from the mixer will be shared by MCTA and Frostburg Soroptimists.

At 8 p.m., join with the Frostburg Chapter of Soroptimist International for an evening of rollicking good fun in the spirit of Halloween as they present “The Witches of Eastwick” at the Palace Theater on Main Street in Frostburg. The movie takes place in a New England town and stars Jack Nicholson as the devil, Susan Sarandon, Michelle Pfeiffer and Cher. Proceeds benefit the Soroptimist project to make the world a better place for women and girls.

Tickets are available in advance from MCTA at Spectrum, 9 E. Main St., from any Frostburg Soroptimist and at the door or box office. For info, call 301-689-9748, or e-mail spectrumllc@verizon.net.

AAUW Features ‘Storm Chasers’

The American Association of University Women – Frostburg Branch will sponsor a special two-hour presentation Saturday, Oct. 24, from 1 to 3 p.m. in the Frostburg United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall. Dr. David Arnold, an assistant professor in the Geography Department, will speak about FSU’s “Storm Chasers.” Arnold introduced this course in 2006, offering scholars summertime opportunities to travel through the Great Plains in search of severe thunderstorms and tornadoes. Arnold, a long-time storm chaser, created the class while teaching at Indiana’s Ball State University. His groups have pursued storms zigzagging through Oklahoma, Colorado, Texas, South Dakota, Wisconsin and Wyoming. Students have also toured some of the great national parks and met with various communities to learn how human habitation affects ecology. Arnold believes the course provides opportunities for students to develop their own perspectives about the environment, and to learn first-hand about the human-land connection and the impact of the environment on lifestyles. For many students, these trips are the first time they have ventured into the nation’s mid-section.

In addition to Arnold’s presentation, AAUW will host several AAUW state officials in discussing inequality in the workplace. The Oct. 24 session is offered to women to learn how the wage gap separates the men from the women, e.g., women earn about 77 cents for every dollar a man earns for the same job. AAUW is committed to passage of the Paycheck Fairness Act (S. 182/H.R. 12), which with the Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act, the first bill signed into law by President Obama in January, will help prohibit pay discrimination.

With a network of over 100,000 women members, AAUW has been the nation’s leading voice in promoting education and equity for women and girls. AAUW is open to any woman with an associate degree or higher. For info, contact Yvonne Beal at 301-689-6849.

Season 3 of ‘LEAD TV’

FSU-TV’s “LEAD TV” is entering its third season! “LEAD TV,” a 30-minute talk show hosted by Dr. Eleisha Ruminski, coordinator of the Leadership Studies minor at FSU, features topics related to the Leadership Studies minor, updates on leadership opportunities and civic engagement on and off campus. Executive-produced by Cable Channel Manager Melanie Lombardi and produced by Mass Communication student Justin Blount, the show will tape three episodes during the fall semester. The first episode will air Tuesday, Oct. 20, at 3:30 and 10:30 p.m., then previously aired episodes will air on Thursdays.
