The recipients of the 2019 Faculty Achievement Awards will be honored at the FSU Honors Convocation and Reception on Wednesday, May 22, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., in the Pealer Recital Hall.

This year's recipients are Andy Duncan, Department of English and Foreign Languages, for academic accomplishment; Dr. Heather Hurst, Department of Educational Professions, for teaching; and Dr. Michael Monahan, Department of Management, for university and community service.

In addition to the faculty award, outstanding senior students and graduates will be honored at the convocation by their departments for academic excellence and leadership.

Duncan is a Nebula Award-winning writer who embodies the award for academic achievement. Duncan's seventh collection of stories, "An Agent of Utopia," was published in November 2018. The book's title story is also nominated for another Nebula Award. Colleagues say Duncan's writing provides exceptional contributions to the discipline, saying that he brings an unmistakable voice, style and perspective to creative writing. Duncan discussed his works and writing career for several podcasts, had full-length interviews in several magazines and carries an international reputation for excellence. He will also, for the third time, lead a week of the prestigious Clarion writing workshop at the University of California San Diego.

In her four years at FSU, Hurst has reached great heights in her excellence in teaching, having taught all levels of students from undergraduate to doctoral level. She has created or redesigned eight courses, including four at the doctoral level, and has taught in all modalities. Hurst has been extremely creative in ways of reaching her students through feedback. In her online teaching, she has focused on maintaining social presence by creating multiple ways for students to interact with each other. Her students have praised her teaching abilities, her knowledge of the subject matter and her willingness to mentor them as they grow personally and professionally. Hurst has also taken on additional roles, such as program coordinator for the Doctor of Education in Educational Leadership program.

He has also served on numerous University committees. In the community, Monahan serves as a secretary of the Foundation for Frostburg organization and is co-author of a key report on the $15 minimum wage for the Maryland legislature. Beyond his service to FSU and the community, he provides service to his profession by serving on multiple management-focused committees.

She demonstrated great promise as a health and physical education teacher during her internship experience at Mountain Ridge High School. Her instructors noted her impressive ability to develop relationships with her students and find unique ways to motivate participation in fitness-related activities. Diggs started for the Women's Basketball Team at FSU, becoming only the 19th player in the program's history to achieve 1,000-point status. Estonian Music Ensemble, Wana Võromaa Wunkorkestri, to Perform in Western Maryland

The Estonian music ensemble, Wana Võromaa Wunkorkestri, will visit Western Maryland in June, performing in Cumberland on Monday, June 3, at 7: 30 p.m. at Our Lady of the Mountains, St. Mary Catholic Church, 300 E. Oldtown Road, and in Oakland on Tuesday, June 4, at 7 p.m. at the Oakland Community Center, 14 N. Eighth St. These events, supported by the Estonian Embassy and the cities of Cumberland, Frostburg and Oakland in partnership with Folklore and Folklife Programming at FSU and FSU's International Studies Program, are free and open to the public.

The performances highlight the Sister-City Cultural Exchange Program – a special relationship between Estonia and Maryland, which began more than 25 years ago with the end of the Cold War as part of a NATO Partnership of Peace Program. Over the years, the partnership has grown to include civilian-to-civilian relationships focusing on the themes of education, twin cities/counties, cultural activities and economic development. As part of the exchange, Maryland residents have visited Estonia and several Estonian groups have visited Maryland. June's programs highlight Cumberland's sister city, Viljandi, and Oakland's sister city, Valga, through the exploration and performance of Estonia's rich folk music traditions.

Representing traditions of Vana-Võromaa, a region in the country's southeast, this group is one of many community ensembles keeping alive Estonia's rich folk music heritage. These ensembles are intergenerational, including children, adults and senior citizens. The region's folk music heritage plays a particularly important role in Estonia's political history, where the performance of its traditional choral music bolstered a cultural reawakening, contributing directly to what scholars refer to as "The Singing Revolution." Choosing song over violence, Estonians gathered en masse to declare Estonian Independence from the Soviet Union in 1991.

While in Western Maryland, the group will tour the newly remodeled Allegany Museum and downtown Cumberland, visit FSU and Frostburg's Main Street, engage in an informal cultural music exchange with traditional musicians at FSU's Mountain City Traditional Arts and tour downtown Oakland.

Presentations

Astronaut Ricky Arnold to Speak About His Seven Months in Space

NASA astronaut Ricky Arnold, a 1985 graduate of FSU, will speak about the seven months he spent last year on the International Space Station on Wednesday, May 22, at 7 p.m. in Pealer Recital Hall. The family-friendly event is a presentation of FSU and is free and open to the public.

Arnold became an astronaut after a career of more than a decade as a science and mathematics teacher at schools around the world. He earned a bachelor's degree in accounting and teacher certification from FSU, and a master of science degree in marine, estuarine and environmental science from the University of Maryland.

Arnold has spent 209 days in space and conducted five spacewalks over two missions. He also completed a mission as an aquanaut in a joint NASA-NOAA mission on NEEMO 13, living and working in and around Aquarius, an undersea laboratory.

Arnold first visited the International Space Station as part of STS-119 via the Space Shuttle Discovery. Then last year, he spent 197 days as a flight engineer in ISS as part of Expeditions 55 and 56, which included numerous educational downlink events to schools.

It was one of these educational downlink events that was the center of NASA Day on campus on April 9, 2018, which happened to be the 120th anniversary of the founding of FSU. More than 1,300 middle school students from the region came to campus to view the downlink and participate in space-themed activities led by dozens of FSU College of Education students.
