Professional Achievements

This booklet highlights the many professional achievements of Frostburg State University's diverse and talented faculty and staff during the past year. As you will see in the following pages, Frostburg's faculty members and professional staff contribute to their fields by producing original research, creative works and performances, and scholarship in teaching and learning. Faculty and staff also engage in wide-spread service to their fields and in the community. These professional activities enhance performance in the classroom and bolster the University's role in supporting regional, cultural and economic development activities. Please join me in celebrating the professional achievements of members of the Frostburg State University Community and thanking them for their efforts.

Stephen J. Simpson, Provost
Frostburg State University

The professional achievements listed are those reported by faculty and staff in response to surveys distributed during the spring of 2002 or in the StateLines campus publication during the 2001-2002 academic year. They encompass achievements during the period from June 1, 2001, to May 30, 2002. There may have been notable achievements that were unreported and thus unlisted.

This list has been compiled and published by the Division of University Advancement.

Messages from the Deans

This year the College of Education experienced a tremendous confirmation of the quality of its faculty, programs and organization. The highlight was achieving one of the first accreditations under the new performance-based standards of the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education. National recognition was achieved for programs in early childhood, elementary education – both alone and in combination – as well as biology, earth science, physics, chemistry, math, English, social studies, administration and supervision, health, physical education and reading. State approval was granted for school counseling, music, art, French and Spanish. Despite the heavy demands of accreditation, the faculty continued its scholarly productivity, increasing its quality and impact.

Dean, College of Education

This is an exciting time for the College of Business. Our faculty have been extremely productive throughout the recent academic year. Professional awards, publications, presentations, grants and service activities are at a record level. Especially thrilling is that faculty are collaborating with each other and with students and then presenting their works at regional and national professional conferences. We've always known that FSU is special, but now we're making a concerted effort to make sure others know that our faculty and students are exceptional.

While the heart of what each faculty member does is in the classroom, a significant portion of time and energy must be devoted to intellectual development activities that help create a vibrant learning environment for students. Each achievement in this booklet might only take up a few lines of print space, but most represent hours upon hours of quality work. I am pleased and proud to have some of the College of Business' faculty achievements listed here.

Connie Groer
Acting Dean, College of Business

Messages from the Deans

Although Frostburg State University may be committed to the idea of being a “teaching institution,” that concept cannot be fulfilled apart from a similar commitment to scholarly activity. Scholarly activity has three components – research, scholarship and creative endeavor – whose principal focal points are oriented toward the academic program of the university and are carried out by individual faculty.

These activities are vital to the university and to its academic programs and have an impact on the student as a learner. They are a very real part of the instructional process. In progress through undergraduate studies, the student is constantly moving toward more and more independent learning and learns that research and creative endeavor are necessary elements in the learning process. Students must have models of ongoing scholarly activity in which they can see the possibilities for their own creative talents. Faculty engaged in scholarly activity provide those models. In this sense, scholarly activity is an integral part of teaching.

Research, creative endeavor and scholarship are also intimately involved in the professional development of individual faculty members. Through the process of sharing the outcomes of professional efforts with colleagues both on and off the campus, validation of progress in developing as a scholar in a discipline is received. Reviewing and critiquing the work of others provides opportunities for faculty to test ideas and concepts developed in their own work. Often, sharing scholarly activity with colleagues on the campus functions as a stimulus to fellow faculty. Since professional development is a lifelong task, sustained effort in this area of involvement is needed.

Frostburg State University's mission as a teaching institution is greatly enhanced by the faculty's commitment to research and scholarship in their professional disciplines. The activities of these faculty as reported in this publication are a tribute to their dedication and commitment to their own continued professional development and to the success of their students.

FSU Advances to “Tier 2” in National “U.S. News” Rankings

In the 2001 edition of U.S. News and World Report's “America’s Best Colleges” listing, Frostburg State University jumped from the third tier to the second tier in the rankings of northern master’s degree granting universities.

The magazine uses four tiers of rankings, based on a wide range of criteria gathered from individual institutions, which are categorized by the school’s mission and/or region. Categories, such as academic reputation, retention and graduation rates and student selectivity, are given specific weights and compared against peer institutions. Salisbury and Towson universities are also listed in tier two.

Many of FSU’s figures were comparable to its peer institutions, and Frostburg posted high statistics in the categories of diversity, full-time faculty, class size and alumni giving. Areas that showed improvement over the previous year included FSU’s reputation score, as determined by other university leaders, its freshman retention rate and the average SAT score of its freshman class.

FSU ranked particularly well in comparison with other public institutions in the second tier, which made up only 15 of the 45 universities listed. In tier one, there are only seven public institutions out of 42.

FSU listed highest in the tier among public universities in the percentage of classes with fewer than 20 students and third among that group in fewest large classes, more than 50 students. FSU also ranked third in alumni giving rates among public institutions and sixth in student-faculty ratio.

“Although we are already aware of the strength of our institution, validated recently by the very positive evaluation we received from the Middle States reviewers of our Periodic Review Report, it is always good to know that others recognize our strengths, as well,” said Dr. Catherine R. Gira, FSU president. “I know that none of the achievements for which we are credited would be possible without the excellent work of our faculty and staff.”

Faculty Achievement Awards, 2002

Dr. Thomas F. Hawk, Business Management Teaching

Dr. Hawk, professor of business management, sets a high standard for intellectual inquiry based on his own drive and passion for learning. His case and discussion method of teaching is both innovative and highly effective. His teaching methods foster "deep learning" and are critical for developing the real life research and decision skills that business professionals need. Colleagues and faculty both at FSU and from other universities praise his willingness to share his extensive exploration of learning theories and pedagogy.

In 2001, his expertise culminated in significant and distinguished Outstanding Reviewer awards from two top national professional organizations.

Dr. MacGregor O'Brien, Foreign Languages and Literature University/Community Service

Dr. MacGregor O'Brien has made valuable contributions to the promotion of multiculturalism and international studies locally, nationally and internationally. He serves as chair of the Department of Foreign Languages and Literature, developed a study abroad program in Ecuador and has facilitated student study in Mexico, Nicaragua and Spain. He helped to design FSU's Center for International Education and the International Studies program, and serves as a translator and interpreter for community agencies.

In addition, Dr. O'Brien participates actively in faculty governance activities. His colleagues praise him as an effective team player, collaborator, tireless innovator, creative curricular initiator, faithful critic and forceful ally.

The Faculty Achievement Awards are made possible through gifts to the FSU Foundation, Inc.
