Tips for Students Studying Online

Strategy #1: Know the Facts. Check your email regularly (at least twice a day, but more often on days that you have online classes – your professor may communicate specific instructions to you before class time begins).

What format will each of your classes take, and what learning platforms or technology will your professors use? Make yourself familiar with them. Make sure that your computer is set up properly and that you can access class resources, video, etc. from home. If you have problems, contact the Help Desk.

Will your classes be synchronous, held at the same time online as they were regularly scheduled in the classroom, or will they be asynchronous, where material will be posted online for you to complete on your own schedule?

Make sure you are aware of any changes to your courses and seek clarification if you are unsure of your professors’ expectations for online attendance, participation, or other requirements.

Strategy #2: Plan Your Days. Just because you are studying at home rather than at school, it doesn’t mean that you throw away your study schedule. To stay on track with what you need to learn and accomplish over the upcoming weeks, you must develop a study plan.

Strategy #3: Eliminate Distractions. If you don’t usually study at home, it will be easier to become distracted when you are trying to get work done. Look for ways to reduce or eliminate distractions, to the extent that it’s possible.

Strategy #4: Keep Priorities in Focus. The routine of going to school every day helps to establish discipline and accountability, and you may feel less motivated without that structure in place to support you. But it’s important to keep your larger priorities in focus during this time, and make sure that your efforts reflect those priorities. Don’t reduce your efforts when no one is watching you. You are going to school because your goals are important to you, and you need to remind yourself of that.

Strategy #5: Stay Engaged with Your Professors. Your professors are still among your most important resources in school, and it’s important that you stay engaged with them.

Tips for Faculty Teaching Online

Dr. Michael B. Flinn for these tips for teaching online.

When on a conference or in a virtual class

- When you are in a meeting with others, consider muting your mic while you are not talking. Ask your students to do the same. Many of the services have EXCEPTIONAL noise-canceling algorithms, but they are far from perfect. Muting will prevent your feed from taking over as “the speaker” when you cough or moved some papers around.
Use your video whenever possible and encourage your students to do the same (although they may be reluctant). Showing faces creates a friendly and accepting environment for everyone in the meeting. It builds a sense of community, and it will keep you from getting distracted.

Professionalism and Security

- Be aware of what is behind you in your video. Consider what is in the field of video of your camera. Do you want everyone to see photos your kids have drawn or memorabilia of where you traveled? If not, consider using the “blur background” feature on many services or just clean up what is in the field of view of your camera.
- Most of the services notify everyone if the meeting is recorded. However, people can use other tools to record the session, such as OBS. (https://obsproject.com/)

Tips for Working Remotely

Dr. Michael B. Flinn for these tips for working online.

If you (or your students) experience video freezing or audio stuttering, often there are some simple changes you can do to fix this

- If you are on wifi – move closer to your wifi router – unless you have high-end wifi, the signal rapidly degrades with a little as one wall between the router and your laptop. A weak wifi signal is typically not noticeable in your Netflix streaming, email checking, internet surfing daily activities; however, it may show up when you are on a video or audio chat programs or services such as Teams. Try to be in the same room as your wifi.
- If moving closer isn’t helping, consider hardwiring into the router. You may have an ethernet cable. Ethernet cables are often bundled with various devices. There are usually 4-5 ports on the back of your wifi router to connect your device. Connecting your laptop via an ethernet cable is especially important for those of you living in an apartment with a lot of neighbors that have wifi set up.
- Reboot the machine (sounds simple, but often works)
- Uninstall any unused programs you may have running in the background.
- When you are teaching with conference tools such as Big Blue Button or Teams, make sure no one in your house is downloading large files. E.g. The latest game for XBOX, PlayStation, Switch, etc.

National Week of Conversation – Series of Online Common Ground for Action Deliberations

Regional college students are invited to participate in National Week of Conversation online deliberation events being moderated by the National Issues Forums Institute. Students will deliberate together with others from across the country over the tough choices on the issue of guns, rights and security in an era of mass shootings and deepening political polarization. Using NIFI’s nonpartisan discussion guide on “How Should We Prevent Mass Shootings in Our Communities,” students can talk about three exclusive options for this issue and weigh the tradeoffs and consequences of acting to find hidden common ground on balancing rights and safety on guns. The three options include make mass killings more difficult, equip people to defend themselves and root out violence and hate in society.

The aim of these forums is to give students a chance to deliberate with peers at campuses that are different from theirs – geographically, in population size and ideologically.
Students should use their University email address to register for one of the conversations using the links below:

Manage Anxiety and Stress

The outbreak of coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19) may be stressful for people. Fear and anxiety about a disease can be overwhelming and cause strong emotions in adults and children. Coping with stress will make you, the people you care about, and your community stronger.

Things you can do to support yourself
Take breaks from watching, reading, or listening to news stories, including social media. Hearing about the pandemic repeatedly can be upsetting.

- Take care of your body. Take deep breaths, stretch, or meditate. Try to eat healthy, well-balanced meals, exercise regularly, get plenty of sleep, and avoid alcohol and drugs.
- Make time to unwind. Try to do some other activities you enjoy.
- Connect with others. Talk with people you trust about your concerns and how you are feeling.

For more information, see the CDC webpage.
