

The BURG Peer Education Network

FYI (First Year Initiative)

Application

What is FYI? The First Year Initiative is a unique opportunity to learn more about becoming a peer health educator at Frostburg State University. Students selected into this program will begin exploring the different ways our student leaders educate their peers on college health issues. Never before has the role of a peer educator been more important than today. A significant number of college student students struggle with anxiety, depression and stress. A peer educator serves as a significant resource on a college campus. Our students have been recognized nationally as a leader in peer education for the past 28 years, helping save lives and creating healthy and positive messages on campus.

Program Requirements

Peer educators are dedicated volunteers and involvement levels vary from student to student. What a student puts into the organization is what they get out of it. We highly suggest weekly attendance of general body meetings and engaging in events as student schedules permit. We feel that our calendar has enough events and activities for students to be active without being overwhelmed.

Benefits

- Make instant friends
- Have a support system
- Receive national certification
- Develop leadership, communication and presentation skills
